

A Ritual of Necromancy

Outside the circle, set up an altar with three candles (the original rite calls for red, white, and black) situated around a black and red triangle, with a picture or representation of the person to be called within the triangle. Burn wormwood and horehound as incense.

1. Make your openings/quarter calls as you feel appropriate.
2. Call upon a force which presides over the dead. The original rite calls upon Hecate with a poetic incantation, followed by an ad-lib request for the deity's help in successfully completing the operation.
3. Call upon the spirit of the deceased. The rite gives the following: "Colpriziana, offina alta nestra, fuaro menut, i name the dead which i seek, thou art the dead that i seek. Spirit of, deceased, you may now approach this gate and answer truly to my calling. Berald, Beroald, Balbin, Gab, Gabor, Agaba! Arise, i charge and call thee." {The magic words are from the Grimoirium Verum, and though i don't wish to go track the reference down right now, they are clearly corruptions of latin and hebrew words.}
4. Make an X sign, calling the person's name. When there is some manifestation in the smoke, Say to it: "Allay Fortission Fortissio Allynsen Roa!" which is also a combination of hebrew and latin. The intent of the words seems to be the giving of strength (fortis) and breath (ruach).
5. Do your business with the deceased.
6. When you wish it to depart, say "Go, Go departed shades by Omgroma Epic Sayoc, Satony, Degony, Eparigon, Galiganon, Zogogen, Ferstigon. I License thee to depart unto thy proper place and be there peace between us evermore."
7. Close shop.
